CITIZENS

On North Hill Want Street Widened.

Held Meeting With County Commissioners Wednesday Morning.

The Board of County Commissioners were on North Hill Wednesday morning, talking with citizens relative to the widening of North Howard st.

From fence to fence North Howard st., on the hill, is 60 feet wide, but the roadway proper is only 44 feet. While a majority of the property owners are in favor of widening the street, others object because they do not want to give up their lawns, nor replant shade trees. That portion of the street that the citizens want widened extends from the top of the hill north to the Cuyahoga road, a distance of half a mile.

The contemplated double tracking of the Northern Ohio Traction company's line between Akron and Cuyahoga Falls, has also interested the citizens of North Hill. They want a flat track constructed.

Manager Bellstein, of the Northern Ohio Traction company, was present at the meeting of the Commissioners and citizens but he did not volunteer any information relating to what his company would do in the matter of constructing flat tracks.

The company's franchise gives it permission to construct a double track and material has already been distributed along the line.

The object of the meeting Wednesday morning was that the Board of Commissioners might find out what was wanted by the citizens. No action has yet been taken in the matter.

LIMITED SEASON.

Only Twenty Days of Hunting During the Year.

A limited number attended the meeting of the Summit County Game Association in the City building Tuesday night. Little business was considered. The bill limiting the hunting season to 20 days will be introduced in the Senate this week. It is the desire of every sportsman that this bill be defeated. If it becomes a law no hunting will be permitted except between Nov. 10 and Dec. 1. This would put an end to the hunting of woodcock and squirrels as they are both out of season before that time. Senator Sieber has notified the Association that he will oppose the passage of the measure.

The Democrat is gaining readers and popularity every day; read it.

There Is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over 1c as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 1c and 2c per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

BURNED

By Alkaline Acids.

Thomas Butler May Lose Sight Both Eyes.

Quantity of Acid Splashed In His Face,

Effecting Burns of a Very Serious Character.

The Accident Occurred at Plant of American Cereal Co.

At noon today Thomas Butler, of 1101 South High st., was so badly burned about the face by an acid compound that he will lose the sight of his left eye, and possibly that of both eyes. His face is also badly burned.

Mr. Butler is an employee of the American Cereal Company. He worked in the boiler room of the plant on S. Howard st., and was carrying a bucket filled with a boiler compound composed of alkaline acids. By an accident, the bucket fell to the floor, and a quantity of the acid was splashed in Mr. Butler's face.

The unfortunate man was hastily taken to the office of Dr. J. V. Cleaver, in the office building of the American Cereal Company, and several oculists were called.

Although the pains resultant of the burns was very severe, the physicians and oculists were able to alleviate Mr. Butler's suffering, and he was taken to his home.

It is feared that Mr. Butler will lose the sight of his left eye and possibly that of the right.

Mr. Butler is aged 35 years, and has a family.

LOVE IS EVER YOUNG.

She had not the least shame about telling her age. On the contrary, she was rather proud to do so. It was something to be proud of. Not that she was 64, but that at 64 she looked not a day over 48, and a blooming 48 at that.

"True, her hair was silver, but what a luring wealth of silver! And it was not sent to soften wrinkles either. She wore as many of those ornaments as it is legitimate to wear at 48 and no more. Oh, she was certainly a wonderful woman for her age, was Mrs. Joseph Allestree.

Her husband had been to town and was late to dinner.
Mr. Allestree, after embracing his wife as if he were a child, just returned from a year's journey, went in with her to dinner, and Mr. Allestree was—but I will not describe him; simply he was everything that the husband of Mrs. Allestree should have been. Forty-two years had gone by since their marriage, and in all that time they had never been separated a single day.

"Dearest," said Mr. Allestree as they sat down, "I owe you an apology for my tardiness, but it couldn't be helped. I got a letter calling me away on an important matter, and I had to stop to attend to some things at the village. I must go immediately—tomorrow."

"Oh, that Perley affair," she said, glancing over the page.
"I cannot, Henrietta. It's got to be attended to at once."

"But, Joseph, you can't go without me. You know you never did such a thing."
"I am afraid I must do it this time," he replied mournfully.

They sat in silence for some moments. Twice Mrs. Allestree wiped away a silent tear with her napkin. At length, bravely assuming a cheerful aspect, she asked: "How long will you be gone?"

"I can't possibly get home in less than ten days."
"Joseph, it will kill us both."
"Ah, no, my dear," he laughed; "it won't do quite that—at least I hope not. It will be hard, very hard. But think, my love, we were apart for five long years once on a time."

"Ah, Joseph," with a sob in her voice, "what was before we had ever lived together. We only knew each other by letter, you know."
"And a mighty comfort we did take out of those same letters. Isn't it strange that in two and forty years we should never have had occasion to write to one another? Not since you were Henrietta Shower."

Mr. Allestree had gone away early on Saturday. Now it was Tuesday. She had managed to be patient over the Sabbath, but on Monday morning when Jimmy came up from Stoneton empty handed she refused to believe that he had not dropped the letter or that the postmaster had not overlooked it.

There were only two deliveries in the 24 hours, and at the evening the same performance was repeated.
On Tuesday Mrs. Allestree went herself to Stoneton and delivered a severe lecture to the postmaster upon the general indifference of government officials, thereby greatly annoying the poor man.

By the middle of the week her whole mood changed. She felt hurt, deeply hurt. There seemed to be no reason, no excuse, for such neglect. To think that this, their first separation in so many years, should be unbridled by a word!

It was the way of men, and he, it seems, was no better than the rest of them. Once out of her sight, he forgot—forgot all the love and daily devotion of 42 years.

By Saturday morning Mrs. Allestree was ill—ill enough to go to bed. Jimmy had to fetch both posts, and, after delivering in person the first one, which consisted of papers only, he vowed to Molly that he would not approach Mrs. Allestree again while Mr. Allestree was away.

All day Sunday Mrs. Allestree lay silent in a dark chamber. Molly could not get a word from her, and she sat by her side, waiting for the end.

But by Monday morning she was suffering from a cold, and she felt that if Jimmy returned without either Joseph or a letter she would surely die, and indeed she nearly did as it was.

When the wheels sounded again upon the gravel, Mrs. Allestree sat up in bed. She was whiter than her hair. No voices were heard below. She clutched her heart and gasped. But presently a door opened and a step came up the stairs. It was the step of Joseph. As he entered the room she fell back among the pillows.

"My dear Henrietta, what's ail this?" He looked around almost accusingly upon the two frightened women, as if he had caught them in the act of assassinating their mistress.

"Joseph, you might have sent me one little line!"
"Henrietta, I wrote to you every day, and sometimes twice a day."

They stared at each other.
"But I never got a solitary letter," she said presently. "I sent to every delivery—went myself until I became ill. Mr. Framwell said there was nothing from you. It nearly killed me, Joseph."

"However," he muttered, "they couldn't have all miscarried. I—Henrietta, I have it! Wait—I'll be back in 20 minutes," and the gentleman fairly ran out of the room.

He laughed all the way down stairs, and she heard his laugh between his shouts for Jimmy to bring back the trap. In a few minutes they rattled out of the grounds, and within the time he mentioned they rattled back again. Mr. Allestree tore breathless up the stairs, bursting into his wife's room. He carried a package of letters, which he spread out in a circle on the bed. There were 14 of them, and every one was addressed to "Miss Henrietta Shower."

For a short space nothing was said, and then the two aged lovers began to laugh, and they laughed until they cried. "Joseph," she said, "it's very funny, very, but it was almost the death of me."

GETTING EVEN.

The Terrible Revenge of a Small Elevator Boy.

"I got even with that typewriter girl with de yeller hair, betcherlife!" said the elevator boy as he stood aside to let the fat man out. "Say, what do you think? She tried to throw me down on me job. That's right! Said I was disrespectful and didn't attend to business. Wouldn't that grind you? But it didn't work, not on yer life! De boss said he couldn't get along without me and promised to raise me wages if I would be good!"

"That typewriter girl with de yeller hair is awfully sweet on a Willie boy what works four floors down, and de Willie boy is blowing in his ten per to keep up appearances. He shoves a bouquet as big as a cabbage up this elevator every day by special messenger, and it made me tired."

"Well, de udder day I took a messenger boy up with a whole flower garden for de girl, and I say de kid was looking around for something."
"What is de matter, pard? I asked."
"Lost de address," said he.
"That's all right," said he. "I kin put you next. Seventh floor, third office to de right, redheaded girl."

How're They Coming With You?
I started round the other day To save myself.
How fast the general public Was accumulating wealth.
Each individual met I interviewed, you see, So now I'll try and tell you what Some of them told me.

A shoemaker said he was "picking away,"
Lawyer was "living low,"
A doctor was making his money "dead easy,"
It's the truth—why "beware" me!
A butcher managed to make "cents meat,"
The loanman had "struck a front,"
The plumber I met was "bitting the pipe;"
Four follow, I guess he's lost.

A pickpocket was "taking things easy,"
While a baker was "doin' his day,"
A grocer told me in confidence That "things were going his weigh,"
A dentist was "living from hand to mouth,"
And here, just to make a rhyme, I'll have to ring in the jeweler Who was working, of course, "overtime."

A burglar said, "Times were picking up,"
But he had to work at night,
And even a poor blind beggar said He was "looking out of sight."
An entitled man was having An awful "hard time," he said, While an undertaker told me He was "doin' quite well—on de dead."

I asked a spiritualist how things were, "Just medium," he replied.
A barber said he was "wrapping along" And then curled up and died.
A furrier "ran a skin game,"
A jockey was "on the go,"
But it turned my head when a dressmaker said She was doing "new and sew,"
